

Christine Cline-Dahlman, BFA, CPhT-ADV

Christine Cline-Dahlman, BFA, CPhT-ADV began her career as a pharmacy technician 13 years ago as part of her retirement plan. Christine imagined working PRN in chain community pharmacy and enjoying life at the beach. On her way to the beach, she made a side-stop in the metro Atlanta area, happened into independent community pharmacy, and learned how engaged a technician could be for patient care. She started in chain, moved into a children's hospital within an academic health-system, then spent the past 8 years connected to independent pharmacy. She left pharmacy practice a year ago to focus on the development of learning content that addresses advanced practice roles for technicians, both ACPE accredited learning as well as non-accredited learning. Through her firm, PharmTechForward, she currently partners with CPESN to produce weekly webinars to identify the clinically based, moderately complex, patient care tasks where the non-pharmacist team members can engage with the patient in order to best serve the patient care process.
